Hospitals remain important sources of referrals for home health, private duty home care, hospice and HME referrals. But as the competition for referrals heats up, relationships with discharge planners and hospitals may become contentious. In addition, some hospital discharge planners are not prepared to perform activities related to discharge planning for home health and other post-acute services. Providers, therefore, do not always receive the information they need thereby increasing risks for discharge planners and their employers as well as post-acute providers.

Gather your staff and join Elizabeth Hogue, Esq., Health Care Attorney & Consultant from Burtonsville, MD for this valuable 90-minute lunch and learn session.
